People Centered

Laura Gonzales

I love that the conference is small and when I think about computers and writing, I think about the people I am gong to see more than anything else.

I am obviously in awe of everything, but the first time we met, we were hugging because we had hugged in the news.

Institutions are a function of people as well as what one might call disciplinary need. Cindy and Gale and the Computers and Comp. community are still very energetic and powerful and supportive. They support lots of people. I have never heard Cindy or Gale or any of the folk connected to us say "no, that's a terrible idea don't do it." They are really generative people. If you have generative people at the center of the subfield, it should be preserved.
