

Copy of Freedom (Page 2, Video 2)

Hazel Williams Small

“ . . . my parents clearly understood that education, education was freedom. Simply, simply put, education was freedom. And I don't mean education for the sake of, of saying that you know something, I don't mean that kind of education, but education that could be put to use, that could be practical, ah, that would serve as a way of negotiating the world to achieve a positive result.”
